TODD RICKS,

Petitioner—Appellant,

versus

WARDEN FNU LNU, FCI Bastrop,

Respondent—Appellee.

Appeal from the United States District Court for the Western District of Texas
USDC No. 1:19-CV-1041

Before STEWART, DENNIS, and WILLETT, Circuit Judges.

PER CURIAM:*

Todd Ricks, federal prisoner # 83035-180, appeals from the dismissal without prejudice for lack of jurisdiction of his 28 U.S.C. § 2241 petition challenging the legality of his sentences for possession of a firearm and ammunition by a convicted felon, possession of a firearm in furtherance of drug trafficking, and maintaining a house used for manufacturing methamphetamine. The district court determined that Ricks could not challenge his sentence under § 2241 because he failed to satisfy the “savings clause” of 28 U.S.C. § 2255(e).

A § 2255 motion is the primary vehicle for collaterally attacking a federal sentence. Pack v. Yusuff, 218 F.3d 448, 451 (5th Cir. 2000). However, a prisoner may challenge the basis of his federal custody in a § 2241 petition if he shows that the remedy under § 2255 is inadequate or ineffective to test the legality of his detention. § 2255(e); Reyes-Requena v. United States, 243 F.3d 893, 901 (5th Cir. 2001). To make that showing, a prisoner must present a claim “(i) that is based on a retroactively applicable Supreme Court decision which establishes that [he] may have been convicted of a nonexistent offense and (ii) that was foreclosed by circuit law at the time when the claim should have been raised in the petitioner’s trial, appeal, or first § 2255 motion.” Reyes-Requena, 243 F.3d at 904.

The district court correctly concluded that Ricks had failed to identify a retroactively applicable Supreme Court decision establishing that he may have been convicted of a nonexistent offense. Ricks essentially repeats those arguments on appeal. He accordingly fails to show that the district court erred by dismissing his § 2241 petition for lack of jurisdiction. See Jeffers v. Chandler, 253 F.3d 827, 830 (5th Cir. 2001).
