demonstrated that his removal would cause exceptional and extremely unusual hardship to his children and that the BIA should have addressed the determination that he lacked good moral character.

Despite Diaz-Zamites's assertions to the contrary, the consequences facing his qualifying relatives if he were removed are not “‘substantially’ beyond the ordinary hardship that would be expected when a close family member leaves this country.” Trejo v. Garland, 3 F.4th 760, 775 (5th Cir. 2021) (quoting In re Monreal-Aguinaga, 23 I. & N. Dec. 56, 62 (BIA 2001)). Because there is nothing in the record compelling a finding that his qualifying relatives would suffer exceptional and extremely unusual hardship, substantial evidence supports the determination that Diaz-Zamites was ineligible for cancellation of removal. See Trejo, 3 F.4th at 775.

Accordingly, the petition for review is DENIED.
